- Server Room Cooling

This Telco hub required temporary cooling while the building system was being upgraded. Heat was vented through exhaust air ducts that allowed direct flow out of the building.

This large server room required a combination of cooling strength and sound performance. Two 5 ton units kept both people and equipment at their ideal comfort level.

When this location needed additional cooling to support their operation, this unit delivered the right amount of cooling punch. Quiet yet dependable, this cooling problem was managed successfully with just one call.

REAL COOL. REAL FAST.
