When the dedicated building cooling system broke down and replacement parts were weeks away, quick response by Cool Air meant acceptable comfort levels were maintained.

This was another example of what this versatile performer can handle. A shut-down of the server room unit required an equally sized temporary unit to take over the cooling load. Once the building system was operational, we simply rolled our unit out the door.

Even when circumstances require these units to be located in close proximity to workspaces, normal day to day activities can continue.

REAL COOL. REAL FAST.
